

Dr Kamalesh Adhikari is a Research Fellow with the ARC Industrial Transformation Training Centre for Uniquely Australian Foods at the TC Beirne School of Law, The University of Queensland. His research focusses on socio-legal issues and concerns associated with the collection, use and circulation of native and indigenous plants, including traditional knowledge. He is also undertaking a critical and historical account of the concept of farmers' rights in Intellectual Property Law.

Dr Adhikari has worked with several Asian organizations, including the Southeast Asian Council for Food Security & Fair Trade.